Date:

21st & 22nd of March, 2025

About the Conference:

The Indian Knowledge System (IKS) encompasses a rich tapestry of traditional practices and wisdom that have been developed and refined over millennia. This conference aims to explore the intersection of IKS and traditional health care practices, particularly in the diverse and culturally vibrant region of North-East India. It will serve as a platform for the academicians, researchers, traditional healers and policymakers to engage in meaningful dialogues, share insights and foster collaborations.

Objectives:

The Conference aims to unite academicians, researchers, students and traditional medicinal practitioners from North-east India on a distinct platform. This platform will facilitate meaningful interactions between researchers and folk healers. The event will feature presentations on research conducted in the field of Traditional Medicine and related disciplines, with the objective of charting a roadmap for the preservation of these practices and fostering further research based on these medicinal traditions. Faculty members, scientists, healthcare practitioners, Research Scholars, Postgraduate and undergraduate students as well as others engaged in or interested in these areas are intensely encouraged to participate in the conference. There will also be an exhibition by some selected Healers from North-east India for practical lessons.

About the Organiser:

The Centre for Indian Knowledge System (IKS), under the aegis of Krishnaguru Adhyatmik Visvavidyalaya, stands as a beacon of scholarly pursuit and cultural preservation, dedicated to the study, documentation and promotion of India's vast repository of traditional knowledge. Rooted in the vision of integrating ancient wisdom with modern understanding, the Centre plays a pivotal role in fostering research and dialogue on the diverse facets of Indian Knowledge Systems, including Philosophy, Health Care, Linguistics, Agriculture, Art and Spiritual Practices. Krishnaguru Adhyatmik Visvavidyalaya, located in the serene environs of Nasatra, Barpeta, Assam is committed to academic excellence of the learners and the holistic development of society. Its mission is to serve as a hub for multidisciplinary learning and research, nurturing a deep respect for India's cultural and intellectual heritage while addressing contemporary global challenges. The Centre for IKS, as an integral part of this mission, emphasizes collaborative efforts to bridge the gap between traditional knowledge and modern science, creating innovative solutions rooted in age-old wisdom. As the organiser of the National Conference on "Indian Knowledge System with Particular Reference to Traditional Health Care Practices in North-East India", the Centre for IKS seeks to spotlight the region's rich and diverse traditional healthcare practices. These practices, deeply entwined with the socio-cultural fabric of the North-East, reflect a profound understanding of holistic well-being and ecological harmony. By bringing together the academicians, researchers, traditional healers and policymakers, this conference aims to explore the relevance of these practices in the contemporary world, while fostering strategies for their preservation and integration into modern healthcare frameworks. Through this initiative, the Centre reiterates its unwavering commitment to nurture a dialogue that transcends academic boundaries, promotes cultural pride and highlights the enduring significance of India's traditional knowledge systems in shaping sustainable and inclusive futures.
